SenditCertified ePackage(TM) Will Pick Up Where Overnight Delivery Has Dropped Off

SenditCertified(TM) Sets the Stage for the Next Phase in Express Mail Services as Corporations Cut Workers and Consumers Look for Ways to Save Money and Reduce Waste

Tuesday December 2, 2008, 8:11 am EST

LOS ANGELES, CA--(MARKET WIRE)--Dec 2, 2008 -- SenditCertified(TM) (www.senditcertified.com), a division of BioConfirm, LLC, has revealed plans to officially launch a groundbreaking technology in January 2009 that will change the express mail and overnight delivery services industry for the better.

By focusing on the green tech ideas of sustainability and source reduction, the innovators behind SenditCertified(TM) are excited to give consumers and various industry professionals a convenient solution for some of today's most practical needs: sending confidential electronic packages and messages using a secure, time-efficient, cost-effective, waste-reducing method.

"As we watch huge corporations like DHL shut their doors literally overnight, while similar companies slash jobs by the thousands, we continue to believe that the technology behind the SenditCertified(TM) brand is the next phase in express mail services," remarked Steve Pfrenzinger, Co-Founder and CEO of BioConfirm, LLC. "Not only will we give consumers an alternative to often pricey ground and air mail services, but the negative impact on the environment will be significantly less."

The key concepts behind the SenditCertified(TM) solutions include: instantaneous, confidential data and large file transfer using an internet-based private global network; patent-pending fingerprint authentication capabilities; and significantly reduced risk of identity theft and hackers.
